Timeline

- 13 August 2026: offer letter issued
- 19 August 2026: joining date, six days after the letter
- 14 January 2027: internship ends and PPO evaluation follows

What the letter does not say

Several points that candidates normally want in writing are missing or vague:

- Working location: not fixed, and it matters for cost of living, visa needs and how the stipend is paid.
- Stipend payment details: no pay date, payment method or currency of payout for someone based in India.
- Working hours and reporting manager: not stated, although the role is called full-time.
- Visa, relocation and accommodation: nothing is said about support if the placement is in Dubai.
- PPO terms: no criteria, timeline or expected salary.
- Acceptance process: no instructions for accepting the offer, and the letter says no further signatures are needed.

Points to verify before accepting

A few details in the letter do not line up and are worth checking directly with the company:

- The HR email is written as mail-info@iconmenc.in, while the website in the footer is iconmec.in. The domain spellings differ.
- The phone number is written as "+97 9942246273", which does not follow a standard UAE (+971) or Indian (+91) format.
- The letter is described as digitally signed, but the visible signature is an image, so its authenticity cannot be confirmed from the document alone.
- A full-time internship at 1000 AED per month (roughly ₹22,000, depending on the exchange rate) with an undecided location is worth clarifying.

These observations do not show that the offer is invalid. They are reasons to confirm it through an independent channel.

Recommended next steps

1. Contact ICONMEC using the phone number and email listed on the official website, not only those in the letter, and confirm the offer was issued.
2. Check the company's registration (FZE LLC in Dubai Silicon Oasis) and look for reviews from past interns.
3. Ask in writing for the working location, hours, reporting manager, stipend payment schedule and any visa or relocation support.

4. Confirm with the university's placement cell whether the offer meets internship requirements.
5. Do not pay any fee for joining, training, equipment or documents. Legitimate employers do not ask for this.
6. Reply to accept only after the points above are answered satisfactorily.

Conclusion

The offer is a short, standard-looking internship letter with attractive terms on paper: a defined role, dates and a stated stipend. The gaps and inconsistencies noted above mean it should be verified before Ayush commits to joining on 19 August 2026.
